

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An efficient and effective system and method for the distribution of video and television broadcasts over the Internet in a multi-cast mode. A high-quality video multi-casting service is distributed, meaning that a single program is simultaneously sent to many individuals. The service also has an interactive communication and information environment associated with it, using the Internet protocol so that additional content can be viewed along with the video that is being received.